The Internet has come a long way since it first came on our TVs. These days, you can stream movies, listen to music, browse the web, and play games, all from your mobile device, no TV necessary. But the beauty of the mobile Internet is that you can access it from just about anywhere. That's what makes it the perfect travel companion. If you're on the road and you're still using your laptop or desktop to access the Internet, you're missing out on a huge part of the experience. To take full advantage of your mobile Internet, you'll need to make sure your device can access your wireless network and that your wireless network is open to the public.
