According to the New York Post, the actress and her family had taken over an event room at Neeson's house after a Christmas Eve party got out of hand, when the actress' father decided to speak with some guests. Neeson reportedly told the guests, "I've got something to say. You know who I hate, and I hate them so much. They're all called the IRA - you know, the Irish Republican Army," according to reports. "You know what they did to me in the Irish War of Independence? F the IRA," Neeson reportedly added, according to the Post. While some of the guests thought the famed actor was joking, one guest told a representative of the Irish Embassy: "He's not Irish, He's English. He thinks he can speak Gaelic." Chloe did not respond to a request for comment, but she shared a picture of the party on Instagram on Wednesday, along with a video of the gathering. The actress and her husband, "Game of Thrones" star Maisie Williams, are also expecting their second child together in April. "So it's a girl!" Williams tweeted on Sunday. On a recent episode of "Talking Funny," the actress discussed having a second child and whether she'd feel like a "mommy's girl" if they had a son.Q: How to recover a lost password (without a computer)?
