Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image forming apparatus using an electrophotographic system, such as a copying machine, a printer or a facsimile apparatus, and more specifically, it relates to a developing apparatus. 2. Related Background Art In a conventional developing apparatus of this kind, generally, a developing agent is carried on the surface of a developer carrying member. The developing agent is supplied to an electrostatic latent image formed on a latent image bearing member to thereby develop the electrostatic latent image. The surface of the developer carrying member is scratched by the carrier of the developer to thereby adhering the developer on the surface of the developer carrying member. Therefore, the developer is gradually gradually worn away by the carrier and the developer carried on the surface of the developer carrying member is gradually shortened in life. In particular, there has been often observed that the transfer of the developer on the surface of the developer carrying member to an intermediate transfer member occurs early. Therefore, the surface of the developer carrying member should be maintained in a low wear condition. The developer of the above kind is composed of toner particles and the carrier such as magnetic powder. The toner particles and the carrier are tribo-electrically chargeable. In this case, when the developer is forced into contact with the carrier, the toner particles are scattered to thereby stick on the surface of the carrier to thereby form a coating. As a result, the surface of the carrier is gradually worn away to thereby shorten the life of the carrier. Therefore, there has been proposed a developing apparatus for preventing the surface of the developer carrying member from being worn down due to the contact with the carrier. For example, there is provided a blade in contact with the surface of the developer carrying member for scraping the coating
