Q: Templated C++ Class with Basic Attributes and Member Functions The following code should work, but when I try to test it (eg create an instance of foo and call the Print() method), it prints nothing to the console. `template class foo : public foo { public: foo::foo() { x = 1; } template void Print(const T& t) { std::cout test; test.Print(5); } }` I would expect the call to `test.Print(5)` to print 5 to the console, but instead it just prints nothing. When I change the signature to: `template class foo : public foo { public: foo::foo() { x = 1; } template void Print(const T& t) { std::cout`
