Adobe Photoshop Elements was officially discontinued in 2018. However, the software is still supported and there is even a new update that brings “advanced features for people who want to start creating images right away”. A recent post from PCMag even suggests that Elements is still the best option for beginners to start learning Photoshop. What is Photoshop Elements? Adobe Photoshop Elements is the best beginner-level image editor for Windows that is priced close to the free version of the popular Photoshop software. It is commonly considered a version of Photoshop for printing and photo retouching. You can edit images, create photos, add special effects, and retouch them at the same time. While this version of Photoshop Elements may not be as advanced as the pro version, it has a simple interface and comes with powerful tools that are easy to use. There are tons of tutorials and videos online to teach you about Photoshop Elements, including beginners and advanced guides. You can also try Photoshop Elements 15, which may still work if you have the older version of the software, thanks to the compatibility mode. If you're used to working with the pro version of Photoshop, it's best to start with Photoshop Elements because it's a lot simpler, and you'll be able to navigate the screen easier and faster. Photoshop There are many other image editing softwares out there that are priced similarly to Photoshop Elements. While these other alternatives might look similar to Photoshop Elements on the surface, they have many more features. If you're new to image editing, you should seriously consider Adobe Photoshop Elements, not just because it's cheaper, but also because it's still supported and updated, which means that if you run into trouble with any plugins or other programs, you can always download the latest version of the software and try your luck. When and why should you use Photoshop Elements? While both Photoshop and Elements have many tools, if you're looking for a program that's a lot like Photoshop, then Photoshop Elements is the perfect alternative for you. While Photoshop Elements may have fewer features compared to Photoshop, it has a simple interface and navigation system that you can use to edit images or retouch them. These are the reasons why we recommend Photoshop Elements over the 05a79cecff

Haploidentical transplantation with anti-thymocyte globulin and cyclosporine in pediatric cancer patients: long-term results. Total body irradiation (TBI) is a main conditioning regimen used in haploidentical transplantation for children suffering from high-risk leukemia. Although such a conditioning regimen induces immune damage, the post-transplant period presents a particularly challenging time. We report the long-term results of a single institution experience with a modified conditioning protocol using anti-thymocyte globulin (ATG) in combination with cyclosporine (CsA) in 9 patients. We retrospectively analyzed the data from a cohort of 9 haploidentical transplantations in 9 pediatric cancer patients with a median follow-up of 4.6 years (range 2.8 to 5.4). The median age at transplantation was 6.8 years (range 2.3 to 14.0), and 10 haploidentical donors (mean age 27.6 years, range 15.6 to 43.1) were used. All patients received total body irradiation (TBI) with a dose of 15 Gy, CsA and ATG (thymoglobulin 0.6 mg/kg/day, 3 consecutive days). CsA was used as graft-versus-host disease (GVHD) prophylaxis (cumulative dose 3.4 g, mean trough levels 350-400 ng/ml). The response rate was 100% with complete remission rates of 11.1% for acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL), 100% for relapsed or refractory ALL, 66.7% for acute myeloid leukemia (AML), and 33.3% for lymphoma. Overall survival (OS) and event-free survival (EFS) were 44.4% and 50%, respectively, at a median follow-up of 4.6 years. GVHD was mild in all patients. The use of ATG in conjunction with CsA enabled prolonged engraftment and a better outcome than with other ATG and TBI protocols in our patients. For pediatric haploidentical transplantation, there is no consensus on the best conditioning regimen. The use of ATG in the conditioning regimen appeared to be safe and associated with good graft-versus-leukemia effects without increase of acute GVHD incidence.ing at 50 V/cm for 10 minutes. After the electroporation, cell monolayers were

315 S.W.2d 170 (1958) H. C. WOODRUFF and wife, Jennie Woodruff, Appellants, v. G. W. PORTER and wife, Blanche Porter, Appellees. No. 5-1420. Supreme Court of Arkansas. November 16, 1958. *171 John T. Lavette, Little Rock, for appellants. Daggett & Daggett, James W. Stanley, R. J. Adams, Little Rock, for appellees. GEORGE ROSE SMITH, Justice. Mrs. Woodruff sued her former employer, Porter, for damages allegedly sustained by her from a fall that occurred after Porter discharged her. At the close of the plaintiffs' evidence the court directed a verdict for Porter, which action is assigned as error. Mr. Porter owned and operated a construction business, having as a sub-contractor a building company, Modern Construction Company. The Woodruffs were one of the company's principal stockholders. In July, 1954, Mrs. Woodruff was employed as office manager for Modern Construction Company and for the two Woodruffs. The agreement for employment was conditioned on her acceptance of a written covenant not to compete. Three months later Porter decided to dismantle the Modern Construction Company and he selected Mrs. Woodruff to be the sole representative of the company when Modern Construction Company ceased to operate. Mrs. Woodruff was given a written contract containing the covenant not to compete, which contract was accepted by the Woodruffs. On October 3, 1954, Mrs. Woodruff was working for Modern Construction Company in connection with the removal of some glass windows. She had no car but she asked that she be allowed to drive her own Model A car to be delivered to her later that day. Porter agreed, whereupon Mrs. Woodruff drove the Model A into the building site and parked it there. About an hour later the last window was removed. Porter told Mrs. Woodruff to take off her shoes and then to go to the building to get something from her office. Mrs. Woodruff testified that she went into the building through the glass door and then "slid down on my knees for I was afraid I was going to fall forward." She fell on her left shoulder and injured the muscles. The medical testimony was that the fall caused a lesion of the deltoid and that the injury was of an acute nature.
